ORGANIZATIONAL HISTORY

The Cadiz Railroad Company was incorporated on 9 March 1901 by the White family of Trigg County, Kentucky. The railroad, which began operations the same year, extended a distance of 10.33 miles from Cadiz, Kentucky to Gracey, Kentucky, where it connected with the Illinois Central Railroad. Slightly over two miles of its length were set around curves and hills in order to meet the 10-mile minimum required to be classified as a railroad. Its first president was William C. White, and other members of the White family also served as president.

The railroad was initially established to haul tobacco, but bad roads in the county prompted the introduction of passenger service. As roads improved, passenger business began to suffer, and was discontinued in 1941. The railroad maintained its freight service, hauling walnut logs, livestock, and large quantities of Trigg County smoked ham in the 1930s. In 1954, the railroad switched from steam to diesel power.

In 1965, the railroad received an economic boost when Cadiz Spring Products, a division of Hoover Ball and Bearing Company, purchased a controlling interest. Hoover built a plant in Cadiz and began using the railroad to ship auto parts. The railroad also carried lumber, feed, livestock, and farm chemicals for area businesses.

In 1984, the railroad acquired a lease of 18 miles of the Illinois Central Line from Gracey to Princeton, Kentucky, but in 1988 Hoover abandoned the track. At the suggestion of H. Stanley White, former president and the grandson of William C. White, the railroad right-of-way was donated to Trigg County. The rails were then removed and 2.5 miles were converted to a walking trail. Dedicated in 1989, it was the first rail trail in Kentucky.

COLLECTION NOTE
