The Passing Scene

The passing scene of highway history is not a pleasant one. It is littered with the accumulated wreckage of fifty years of accidents. It is strewn with the bodies of men, women, and children. Among its population it numbers 10 to 15 million persons who have been injured. Its economic waste takes its toll in the billions.

Around the bend of the future, the scene is even more gory to contemplate. At the present rate, it should have taken the lives of the time to accomplish the same violence, destruction, and courage.

Each year we stand at milestones of the past, marveling at the progress we have made. We see our dirt roads become highway superhighways. We see our small towns be replaced by the great megatons of man-made buildings that are home to more than 200 horsepower. We have seen the safety squads grow from a few squads of medicos to a national organization of trained men, women, and children, who are the modern day heroes of the plains.

Accidents of highway armor have been the source of many of the accidents involved in the passing scene. It was found that curved roads were no more dangerous than the flat ones. It was also found that the span of the passing scene, those found to be variables in the larger scene, were found to be variables in the larger scene.

In 1972, the traffic was found to be a negligible factor. It was found that curved roads were no more dangerous than the flat ones. It was also found that the span of the passing scene, those found to be variables in the larger scene, were found to be variables in the larger scene.

Life Long Friends

While in attendance at Western, everyone of the students has made new friends and these friends will be lasting ones throughout the life of every graduate.

How that graduation is near, it is time to think of the friends at Western and all those who have made you what you are today.

Call on your class mates in the faculty or administration before leaving and of course call on your college friends. Some of them, maybe some by name, but you want there to see them again, then certainly you want to associate with them.

The friends you have made here will no doubt be your friends for life.

Opportunity For You

With graduation near at hand, a number of Western students are beginning to think of the opportunities that lie ahead for them. The recent graduation of the class is a sign of things to come.

The training school program designed to prepare the student for a career in the music business is an excellent example of this. The students are grouped into teams and each team is assigned a specific area of study. The teams then work together to achieve their goals.

Wesley A. Ball Witnesses McCarthy - Army Hearing

By Judy Koch

"It's and it to keep up with as a new ring around the weather." These are the words of Wesley A. Ball, a sophomore, in reference to his recent visit to the McCarthy-Army investigation now taking place in Washington.

As a social science major, Wesley A. Ball is interested in world affairs. He attended the proceedings while visiting his family in the nation's capital during the KKK vacatio.

The highly publicized controversy concerning the procedures of the Senate Office Building, and admittance of the public is limited. Wesley, however, was able to secure a Senate pass from Kentucky Senator, Barrie C. Clements, and he attended the afternoon and session on Friday, April 8.

Highlighting the events in the high school was the oral examination of the Secretary of the Army, General H.C. Stone, by Senator Ray Enslinger. Involving the pertinent question on the legality of using FBI or phone conversations in evidence the discussion became quite heated.

As the gallery seat filled a limited view of the witnesses in the investigation, Wesley preferred to stay at the edge of the gallery during each session. From this position, he could not only see the main points of the discussion but also see a few audience members in each new development.

Members of the press seemed to dominate the scene. During the Senate probe, Wesley talked to Bob Owens, noted journalist, covering the story for International News Service. Afterward he chatted with Senator Ed. R. Morrow, father of Ed. R. Morrow, who was in the Senate building.

Wesley felt that his experience gave him more of a better understanding of the investigation lines. "The overall picture of such proceedings is far more intense and enlightening than the limited phonographs and television pictures in the newspapers," he says.
