AN INTRODUCTION TO

THE UNIVERSITY HONORS PROGRAM

As students who have been recognized by the University for your outstanding academic excellence, you may want to consider becoming participants in the University Honors Program. The Program was established to assist superior students achieve personal and academic goals and fulfill their full intellectual potential.

Although an Honors student may follow any major, minor, or area of concentration offered by the University, the Departments of History and Psychology offer special majors for the Honors students majoring in those academic areas. Also, a limited number of Honors participants are allowed to design for themselves, working closely with faculty advisors, specialized programs of study to fulfill their own personal, unique needs.

Academically outstanding students can participate in the University Honors Program in either of two ways. First, students who have completed up to 90 semester hours of college work with a G.P.A. of 3.3 or above may apply to become Honors participants. These students take 12 hours of honors course work and have special research funds available to them for independent work on projects of interest. Upon graduation, the student's transcript will designate him/her as a University Honors Program Participant. Second, capable students may apply for enrollment in specific Honors courses through the Open Honors Program. The Open Honors Student takes one or more courses of interest to him/her and must submit an application separately for each Honors course he or she desires to take. The Open Honors student has no requirements to meet concerning number of hours in Honors courses, etc.

Listed below are the courses that will be offered during the Fall semester of 1979. We hope they will be of interest to you and will lead you to think seriously about joining the Honors Program, either by becoming an Honors participant or by enrolling in individual courses. For an application and/or for further information, contact Dr. Faye Robinson, Director, University Honors Program, 217 Weatherby Administration Building.
