President Says WKU ‘Will Move Forward With Great Strides’

In an announcement at the University’s Board of Regents meeting last Thursday, President Meredith said he and his family were “honored and humbled by the strong demonstration of support we have received from the people of Bowling Green and Warren County; Glasgow; the faculty, staff and students at Western, and from the people across our state.

“There have been many concerns expressed during recent times pertaining to the relationship between members of the Board and Regents and the President. It is time for these concerns to be put behind us and all of our energies directed toward making this University an even better place for our students to achieve their educational goals.

“Through the efforts of our faculty and staff, our wonderful student body, and the countless supporters of this institution, much has been accomplished during the last three years. Yet, we have only begun to realize our potential. We are poised to move forward with great strides.

“Because of my love for this University and because of the commitment my family and I made to come to Western and to the Commonwealth to make a difference, I have notified the University of Central Florida that I am withdrawing my name from consideration.”

A Budget Message from the President

The Council On Higher Education has recently notified Western Kentucky University and other public universities that due to state revenue shortfalls we will soon be experiencing a reduction in state appropriations.

The reduction earmarked for all of the public higher education entities that due to state revenue shortfalls will soon be experiencing a reduction in state appropriations.

The reduction earmarked for all of the public higher education entities that due to state revenue shortfalls we will soon be experiencing a reduction in state appropriations. It appears that our share of this amount will be approximately $2.35 million less.

than we anticipated receiving.
The University's Budget Committee, comprised of representatives from the various segments of the University, has been meeting regularly to develop an operational plan for handling this shortfall in our budget. I will ask the Board of Regents to approve the final plan when it is finished. Western XXI will serve as our guide as we seek to find the appropriate way to adjust our budgets to meet this mandate. It is our intent to have as minimum an impact as possible on classroom instruction. As you know, preliminary steps have already been taken to freeze all existing vacant positions and all capital equipment purchases of $300 or more. Fortunately, we received the largest increase in our compensation base for the current year that we have received in quite some time. That increase will not be impacted by this budget reduction. Although this reduction in our budget will not be made without a measure of sacrifice and inconvenience, please have confidence your Budget Committee is making every effort to meet this challenge in a systematic manner with the best interest of the institution as its guidepost.

We will make every effort to keep you informed as we continue to monitor this important topic.

Jo Ann Thompson Is 1991 Top Business Adviser for Student Publications

By Sandra Karr
An intern in Internal Communication in the Office of University Relations.

"This award tells me that all the students have appreciated my endeavors to help them reach goals in their lives," said Jo Ann Thompson, WKU's student publications office supervisor and advertising adviser who is 1991 Distinguished Business Adviser for student publications.

College Media Advisers, a national non-profit organization of student media professionals who advise student newspapers, magazines, yearbooks and electronic media made the award.

Thompson won in the four-year college category. She came to WKU in 1975 and worked with David Whitaker in University Publications, now Student Publications. Whitaker received the business adviser award in 1973. Thompson said she worked with "the best."

She was nominated for the award by a former advertising manager for the Herald, Amy Taylor, who had the idea, and Bob Adams, student publications director, a CMA member.

Taylor describes Thompson as being very helpful and dedicated. "She'll do her best. She won't do it halfway."

Thompson has seen several changes in the publications over the years. The biggest change she has seen is the technology, especially the computers, and that continues to change every day. On the business side, the advertising has grown each year.

"We call it a small business, but it is a fairly large business,

Thompson said. Besides changes in the size and publication days, has seen the circulation grow from 8000 students to approximately 12,000. The advertising staff has continued to grow also. About 14 people are currently working on the staff rather than two or three in the past. Due to her efforts, the advertising staff is now broken into a production staff and a sales staff.

Thompson handles the day to day operations of both publications. She also works with the advertising staff and the local businesses who advertise.

Working with the students is Thompson's favorite thing about her job.

"My job wouldn't be here if it were not for the students," she said. She works for the students and tries to make things easy for them. She helps the students with anything whether it involves the publications or a personal problem.

"I've learned a lot from them," Thompson said. She said she works with many bright and mature students. Because WKU has one of the best journalism programs around, the students feed over into the publications, she said.

She said Steve does his 50 percent and more around the house.

"Without their support and help, I couldn't spend the time here," she said.

Thompson is a member of CMA and secretary/treasurer of WKU Publications Alumni Association. In 1989 she received the College Heights Herald Award for Excellence in Journalism.

Thompson is finishing her degree at WKU in Small Business Management. Someday she hopes to own her own business, a "company newsletter type business."

"My friends are always asking me when I am going to get a real job," she said. She said her friends think that people who work don't like their jobs.

"I really enjoy what I am doing. I can't think of anything more fulfilling," she said. She has no plans of leaving WKU right now; she said she still has goals she wants to meet. She wants to increase the size of the classified section and keep it at a full page.

Down the road, she would like to see the Herald go daily and the raise the revenue to support it.

Above all, her ultimate goal is for students to graduate, find a good job and be happy. She said she hoped they "find a job that has as much enjoyment as I've had."

"This is not a job for her. It is a way of life," Adams said. He said she really cares about the students and the publications. He has served as a chairman of the awards committee in the past and said that the nominees are judged on what people say about them in the letters of recommendation. He said the award is reflective of what all Thompson does with the publications.

"Jo Ann is a vital member of the publications team. She's the one person we can't do without. She really does care about the students and publications," Adams said.

A reception will be held today from 2:30 to 4:30 p.m. in Garrett Conference Center Room 100. The reception, sponsored by the Office of Student Publications and the Department of Journalism, will recognize the accomplishments of Thompson, the Herald and the Talisman.

Congratulations To The Newly-Elected President's Staff Advisory Council:

Sponsored Awards:
WKU Achieves Seventh Annual Consecutive Record for FY 1991 With $6,099,700

WKU has for the seventh consecutive year had a record increase in sponsored activity during the last fiscal year. Total dollar value of awards to the University for FY 1991 was $6,099,700, an increase of ten percent ($550,000) over last year. Dr. Charles L. Eison, director of sponsored programs, reports the number of awards received was 167, an increase of 24 over last year, and the total value of proposal requests this past year was $12,792, an increase of 12 percent over the $11,454,779 for FY 90. Eight out of ten proposals submitted to the University to external agencies were funded, with 39 percent representing federal funding, 29 percent from the state, 27 percent from other public agencies, such as local governments and five percent funded by private sources.

"Western maintains a high ratio of awards, which is a function of the calibre of proposals being produced by WKU faculty," Dr. Eison said. Listed are 1991 recipients of sponsored awards and their projects.

New Director Stresses On-Going Process Through Continuing Education Center

By Carol Overby
Student news writer, University Relations

Since education is playing such a large role in society today, "it shouldn't be that you go to school and get what you need and never come back," according to the new director of Western's Continuing Education Center.

Dr. Sandra Webb, who took over the position in July, said education should be an on-going process.

"The Continuing Education Center offers professional development opportunities for Kentucky citizens," Webb said. "The University has three missions: teaching, research and service. We're the service part."

The Continuing Education Center, which is a part of the Institute for Economic Development, has four main components — outreach, consulting services, overseeing continuing education units and administering a full-service conference facility.

"We have the responsibility of providing housing in Florence-Schneider Hall for continuing education groups and we work with the Kentucky Bank Management Institute, the Kentucky Sheriff’s Academy and the Training Resource Center, which is affiliated with Eastern Kentucky University," Webb said. "Last year, over 3,000 people were served through these programs."

Webb brings to Western a strong background in continuing education, most recently having served as program administrator for the Center for Professional Development at Florida State University in Tallahassee, Fla.

"While at Florida State, I organized training for state agencies and private groups and did off-campus programs," she said. "I also had a fellowship, and was able to complete the program for my doctorate degree in three years."

A native of Pittsburgh, Pa., she also worked for the Center for Business and Industrial Advancement at the Williamsport Area Community College in Williamsport, Pa.

As the new director of Western's Center for Continuing Education, Webb is excited about the many possibilities for growth of the center.

"The biggest thing we're involved in right now is turning the Bowling Green Center on Nashville Road into the Office of Economic Development and Conference Center," she said. "Our offices will move out there and half the space will be devoted to conference space and meeting rooms."

With the new facilities, Webb said the center will be able to bring in new groups, and they also hope to work more closely in supporting the continuing education activities of the different academic departments.

"Western has a strong tradition in teaching, and we want to incorporate that into continuing education," she said.

"We want to take the resources the University has to offer and spread them out to adults who need professional training."

Mathematics Symposium Features Contemporary Aspects

The Colloquium Committee of the Department of Math has announced its 1991 Mathematics Symposium theme is Mathematics: Key to the Life Sciences.

Thomas Richmond, coordinator, says, "Our three invited speakers will point out some interesting and contemporary aspects of the interdisciplinary utility of mathematics."

More than 90 colleges and 100 high schools have been invited to the Symposium Friday and Saturday, Nov. 15 and 16 in the Kelly Thompson Complex for Science.

De Witt Summers, professor of mathematics at Florida State University, will speak at 8:30 p.m. Friday in TCCW 129 on New Scientific Applications of Topology.

Saturday's program will feature Tom Hayden, University of Kentucky, on Distance Geometry and Molecular Conformation, at 9 a.m. and Wieb Van Der Meer of WKU's faculty at 10:15, speaking on The Role of Mathematics in Spectroscopic Studies of Biomembranes and Proteins.

Summers will deliver another address on The Topology of DNA at 11:30.

All addresses will be in TCCW 129.

For more, call Tom Richmond, 6223.
