Welcome new and veteran faculty and staff!

On Campus is Western Kentucky University's publication for faculty and staff. We publish every other Wednesday during the regular school year and monthly during the summer.

We send stacks to every department on campus, and please let us know if we need to send more than the numbers you receive.

Many departments put your copy right in your mailbox. We thank those who do!

On Campus contains news and feature stories about WKU and you, and our sole purpose is to serve you as an internal communication vehicle.

Therefore, please let us know of your achievements, give us story ideas, call with suggestions about future columns or information you'd like to see.

On Campus is published through the Office of University Relations. Send items to Sheila Eison, Editor, or call us at 5380 or 4297.

Have a great year!

President Thomas C. Meredith and the Board of Regents of Western Kentucky University invite you to the RE-OPENING CEREMONY for Potter Hall

Dr. Nace Magner, Assistant Professor, presented a paper on "Attitudes Toward Budgetary Resource Allocation and Retailers" at the American Accounting Association meeting in New York this month.

Education and Behavioral Sciences

CONSUMER AND FAMILY SCIENCES
Dr. Joyce Rasdall, Professor of Consumer and Family Sciences, has been selected a founding member of the National Electrical Safety Foundation at its charter meeting at the National Press Club in Washington, D.C. in May. The Foundation's mission is to promote the safe use of electricity in the home and workplace through an annual national electrical safety campaign. The Board is made up of representatives from industry, public interest groups, utilities, associations and labor unions. Rasdall will represent educators from elementary through higher education while werving with board members representing electrical inspectors, fire protection associations, manufacturers and retailers.

Finance and Administration

Dr. James R. Ramsey, Vice President for Finance and Administration, was selected by the United States Information Agency and the University of Kentucky to teach in a Public Administration and Management seminar in Kazakhstan Aug. 3-13. Dr. Ramsey joined six professors from UK in providing training on economic and financial management issues in the former Soviet State that is now pursuing a democratic government and market-oriented economy.

Earl Fischer elected Regents chair

Earl Fischer elected
Regents chair

Earl Fischer of Owensboro was elected chair of the Western Kentucky University Board of Regents for 1994-95 at the board's quarterly meeting on campus Aug. 15.

Fischer, president of Western Kentucky Gas Co., succeeds Bums Mercer of Hardinsburg, who had been chair since 1992. Peggy Loafman of Bowling Green, executive vice president of Trans Financial Bank, was elected vice chair.

"It has been absolutely outstanding that this board has jelled so well and has once again come together as a unit," Fischer said, adding that much of the credit for the board's success is due to Mercer's leadership.

Elizabeth Esters was re-elected secretary to the Board and James Ramsey, vice president for Finance and Administration, was re-appointed treasurer.

In other business, the board:

- Administered the oath of office to three new regents. They included Cornelius Martin of Bowling Green, who replaced Monnie Hankins of Louisville; Robert D. Evans Jr. of Owensboro, the student regent who replaces Donald Smith of Elizabethtown, and Joy Gramling of Scottsville, Western's first regent to be elected by the staff;
- Approved a proposal for a master of science program in nursing. The program would include options for generalist and nurse practitioner and would place Western in a leadership position in health care reform, according to Robert Haynes, vice president for Academic Affairs.
  "The nurse practitioner is the future in the field of nursing in the United States and in the state of Kentucky and we think this institution needs to be positioned to take advantage of that change," Dr. Haynes said. "Health reform is one of the main items of the national agenda and we need to get our University positioned so we will be in the forefront of those reform movements."

The request must be approved by the Kentucky Council on Higher Education;
- Approved the creation of the Department of Allied Health and Human Services by merging Allied Health with the Social Work Program;
- Approved the creation of a University Distinguished Professorship to recognize outstanding faculty. To be eligible for the distinction, which lasts for five years and includes an annual stipend, the faculty member must have been at Western at least 15 years and held the rank of professor for at least seven years; and
- Approved an agreement with the Western Kentucky University Foundation for fund raising and management of gifts and contributions.

Power to the people

Meet Joy Gramling, Assistant Paint Supervisor, who was elected in June to serve a three-year term as the University's first staff representative to the Board of Regents.

By Sheila Eison

Nearly everybody on campus knows Joy Gramling.

"If they've had their offices painted, I've probably met them," says the Assistant Paint Supervisor in Facilities Management who is WKU's first staff member to join the University's Board of Regents.

The 43-year-old single mom has been a member of Western's staff for the past 16 years, and in a run-off election in June, was voted by the University's staff members their top choice from among 14 candidates to represent them on the University's governing board.

A very familiar pleasant face on campus accompanied always by friendly conversation, Gramling has earned a reputation of being first-rate, both with people and on the job.

While working at WKU, she's completed a two-year degree in general studies, and is a senior, going six hours a semester for her general studies, and is a senior, technology, she says proudly, a four-year-old son, and is a senior, technology, she says proudly, a friendly conversation, Gramling has earned a reputation of being first-rate, both with people and on the job.

While working at WKU, she’s completed a two-year degree in general studies, and is a senior, going six hours a semester for her general studies, and is a senior, technology, she says proudly, a friendly conversation, Gramling has earned a reputation of being first-rate, both with people and on the job.

"My courses have helped me on the job," she says, indicating taking an industrial psychology class helped her as a supervisor learn more about performance appraisals, and safety courses which have helped with her work.

Gramling also served on the WKU Women's Alliance Advisory Committee to the President from 1991-93 and currently is on the group's membership committee.

It could have been her visibility which made her the top choice, or it may have been Gramling's energy and enthusiasm that won her the seat to speak for her colleagues, but one thing's for sure: she has definite ideas about what she wants to accomplish during her three-year term as a Staff Regent.

Getting around campus like she does meeting the people whose offices and classrooms she paints has given her perspective, Gramling says, which in turn gets to the heart of what she believes to be the key to a successful University:

"What the staff does on a day-to-day basis ties everything else together at the University, and keeps the place running," she says, adding:

"All of us, whether we’re faculty or staff, have to keep things running smoothly," Gramling says since her job’s painting, she takes seriously getting classrooms and offices in shape for people to be productive.

And if in large measure her success rests on getting along with people and in getting people to go along, she’s got what it takes.

While a new coat of paint makes an office pretty, it sometimes takes hanging from high ladders and scaffolds to get it done. She can be tough when she needs to be.

"Whether it's doing paperwork for students in the financial aid office, or me painting, there are countless things staff members do every day to keep this operation running.

"All of this is tied closely to the academic world because students can’t learn in an environment with plaster falling off the walls and old paint...someone has to fix that to make a better situation for them to learn in."

"I want to see us at Western become a community where we make it as comfortable as possible for students to get an education," she says.

Community spirit Gramling also knows a lot about.

Four years living in a communal household in the early seventies was a part of that experience, and anybody around these parts is familiar with the legendary Flying Frog Farm, which still has an annual hoe-down and square dance, and is a part of that legacy.

"I've probably met them," says the University's first staff member to join the University's Board of Regents.

"I've probably met them," says the University's first staff member to join the University's Board of Regents.

Joy Gramling

"Getting along with people on the streets of Washington was something I will never forget. I can’t begin to describe the feeling of power I would get from the people with Joy

There was never a time, even during some of the really large protests, that I ever felt afraid of the police, or of the helicopters which hovered overhead.

"It made me realize that people are a powerful force, that as a group they can have a very loud voice, and that they can be heard. "We're the people who keep this University running, and I think I have a good feel for where the people are coming from," Gramling says.

Her campaign platform put emphasis upon communication and cooperation.

A printed flyer illustrated a pie-shaped graph illustrating the diversity of Western's staff, and Gramling emphasized: "The staff regent will need all the help available to represent the whole staff fairly. "I've been told this (being staff regent) will be an impossible job because of the diversity and the sheer number of staff (840) I will represent," she says.

"The faculty are perhaps a more similar group, people with degrees and similar goals of teaching and publishing, but staff members are divided among professional non-faculty, secretarial and clerical, skilled crafts, technical paraprofessionals and service maintenance people," says Gramling, running her hand across her head, beads of perspiration suddenly appearing on her face.

"That's why I want to hear from everybody," she continues, saying one of her goals is to "see the staff have its own organization, because our strength lies in joining together as a group. As staff regent, I welcome the opportunity to work with any group...such as a Staff Congress or Staff Senate...I want to hear from everybody and I encourage people to get in touch with me," she says, adding forums are a good way for people to have a voice.

"I want to thank everyone who supported me."
WKU's location on the information highway

By Dr. Charles Anderson

Faculty and staff in Thompson Complex North Wing, Thompson Complex Central Wing, Environmental Science and Technology Hall, and Grise Hall will soon have their own ramps to the Western Information Highway—WKUNET. The Fishel Company of Cincinnati, Ohio submitted and excellent low bid and plans to begin construction in the near future with completion in approximately 90 days.

Design and specifications are near completion for Phase II of the wiring—Cherry Hall, Ivan Wilson, Academic Complex, Gordon Wilson and Garrett. Phase III will include most remaining buildings. All wiring should be completed by the end of calendar year 1995.

Once the connection in an office and a classroom is complete and associated electronics (hubs) are installed, the individual user will have full access to WKUNET. WKUNET is up and running in its development stage in Wetherby and will soon be in Potter Hall.

Services now available to users include an easy to use electronic mail (Lotus cc:Mail), a calendaring program which will also provide for easier scheduling of meetings, access to the Library's Topcat catalog, access to a stack of reference CD-ROMs in the Library, Internet including Mosaic access to World Wide Web servers which provide graphics and images, mainframe access to authorized services including SIS and IRS, several applications packages including Lotus 1-2-3, Freelance Graphics and others for occasional users, and tutorials on several software packages.

This is only the beginning. The Library is exploring a pilot project which will provide local electronic access to the Federal Register and the Congressional Record. the Campus Wide Information System Committee will review the potential for additional resources which may be provided centrally or from an individual department.

The first phase of CD-ROM access will be added to the network within the next month as a cooperative project of University Libraries and the Technology and Telecommunications group. Eighteen CD-ROM reference works will be available in the first phase. The number is expected to grow to over 50 in the near future.

The student segment of WKUNET will debut during the fall semester. Work on some additional wiring required in 14 halls including Pearce-Ford should begin in September. When it is completed, students with microcomputers will access all of the services available from WKUNET in a lab—Internet, mainframes, E-Mail, etc.—from their rooms.

250 new Dell 486-66MHz microcomputers were purchased during the summer and will be available in the Academic Computing general access labs in Helm, Thompson, Grise, STH and Cherry Hall. These new computers are upgradeable to pentium and provide the needed speed and memory for Windows and windows based applications. Most of the labs also have access to Internet, University Libraries, CD-ROM reference materials, and student's mainframe (IBM or VAX) accounts.

We are pleased with the technology team's accomplishments, but we are redoubling our efforts to accelerate progress. Our goal is universal network connectivity, which will provide local and remote access to today's technology, to the potential for other software developers—Microsoft, Lotus, and others. However, when Western's basic infrastructure is complete, the most important developments will undoubtedly come from individual departments and faculty as powerful, specialized software is acquired or developed and used in the classroom, labs, students rooms and eventually from off campus.

With all of the networking developments, the importance of training and assistance with computing applications is growing. The Microcomputing Support Center will continue to schedule training sessions in basic (Windows and WordPerfect) and some more advance applications (Lotus 1-2-3, Freelance Graphics, etc.). Call 3982 for help.

Anderson is WKU's Assistant Vice President for Finance and Administration.

Tour Europe with the Choir!

There will be space available for non-singing participants to accompany the WKU Choir on its May 1995 Tour next Spring.

Dr. Gary McKercher, Assistant Professor of Music, has announced plans for the '95 Choir tour.

Stops will be in Belgium, France, Switzerland, Austria and Germany from May 9 to 24.

The Choir will present approximately seven concerts in European cathedrals and churches.

Cost of the trip is $1782, and this includes air transportation, two meals per day, hotel and private home stays and land transportation.

Deadline for the first deposit toward the trip is Sept. 1.

For more information, call Dr. Gary McKercher at 5915.
Reaping the rewards of friendship

By Bob Skipper

When Dee Hooks created a sizable endowment for the forensics program at Western Kentucky University, it was just another in a long list of times she had crossed paths with forensics Director Judy Woodring.

Their relationship began years ago in Providence, Ky., when Mrs. Woodring entered the 7th grade and Mrs. Hooks became her speech teacher.

"Another teacher introduced her to me because I was the speech teacher and she thought she might be interested in entering some of the speech events," Mrs. Hooks recalled from her Bowling Green home. "She was more interested in debate and I was more interested in debate, too. She took over debate. She was a natural."

Mrs. Hooks remained Mrs. Woodring's teacher and forensics coach throughout high school, encouraging Mrs. Woodring to go on to college.

"I probably wouldn't even be doing this if it hadn't been for (Mrs. Hooks)," said Mrs. Woodring, who is also executive director of the Kentucky High School Speech League. "I thought, 'This is what I really like.'"

Mrs. Woodring said people told her she would be unable to find a job just coaching forensics. "I sort of have the last laugh because that's what my whole job is now."

After Mrs. Woodring graduated from Western, Mrs. Hooks, herself a WKU graduate, helped her land her first teaching position by retiring from Webster County High School and insisting the school system hire Mrs. Woodring. Mrs. Hooks then continued to coach and teach in the community college system.

Their paths continued to cross as Mrs. Hooks followed Mrs. Woodring's career as a high school forensics coach. Mrs. Hooks moved to Bowling Green in 1982 following the death of her husband; Mrs. Woodring came Western in 1988.

Mrs. Hooks said she continued to read about the success of Western's forensics students as Mrs. Woodring began to build the program. Then two students won the right to compete in a national oratorical contest in Alaska this summer.

"I thought, 'What a great opportunity, but I'll bet they haven't got any money,' because I know how the speech department is and I've known speech teachers who have had to make their own money," Mrs. Hooks said. "I didn't believe in taking time out from coaching my students to have different money-making projects. I just didn't think that was right."

Mrs. Hooks said she knows there will be other opportunities like the oratorical competition in Alaska, and she set up the endowment, rather than a one-time gift, to help in the future.

"Of course the state hasn't been interested in much financing lately, and I guess there's a reason for it," she said. "I just felt like the speech program is the one that's usually not thought of when you talk about money, and I knew Judy worked hard and that it would be spent wisely."

Mrs. Woodring said money can be used in many ways.

"I think one of the reasons Mrs. Hooks gave it to the forensics program is because she's coached forensics for years and she realizes that you usually have a very limited budget," she said.

The gift is important to the nearly 30 students in the program because it can be used to defray such things as travel and tournament expenses, even though the administration has been very supportive during the recent budget crises.

"This is the largest gift we've had since I've been here," Mrs. Woodring said.

The gift is also important on a personal level.

"This was kind of like a gift to me because she knows how hard I struggle with this program," Mrs. Woodring said. "It is a struggle to be able to attract good students and to continually provide from them a means to go and do things."

The endowment also means that Mrs. Hooks will continue to touch the lives of students, even though she has retired from teaching, Mrs. Woodring said.

"She wanted to give money to Western," she added, "and she wanted to give it to a program she felt connected with in some way, and I think I'm the connection."

For information about opportunities for giving to Western Kentucky University, contact Robert M. Rutledge III, vice president for Institutional Advancement, 6208.
