The University's Board of Regents at its regular quarterly meeting Jan. 20 approved a strategic plan and a budget for a major capital campaign, designed to raise $15 to $20 million over the next six years.

Sheila Eison

Ask nearly any faculty member of an educational institution what he/she distrusts about the school's administration, and inevitably the answer will have to do with self-indulgent administrative salaries and arbitrary budget management—or something similar.

Then try to convince to the contrary. Unfortunately, those usually trying to do the convincing will be administrators, and therefore, suspect, with a minimum of credibility. So there you have it: Catch 22.

Solutions? The experts will tell us changing attitudes is often difficult at best, so the next best thing is to simply keep providing information, accurate information, and let the receiver decide for oneself how to deal with it. A sound approach, especially for a higher education institution.

And one WKU has committed to, and will need to achieve its goal of raising $15 to $20 million over the next six years as the institution embarks on its first ever Major Capital Campaign.

Monies raised will not be used for general operating costs, rather for enhancement of identified WKU quality programs.

The green light given to the Strategic Plan and Budget for the Capital Campaign by the University's Board of Regents at its Jan. 20 meeting represented a commitment on the part of WKU's governing board that it supports the campaign, and WKU, in turn, promised to make it happen, for the benefit of the University's programs.

R. M. "Bob" Rutledge III, WKU's Vice President for Institutional Advancement and Executive Director of the Western Kentucky University Foundation has announced that the University and Foundation have received more than $3.4 million in gifts, pledges and estate commitments since July 1, 1994, with a significant number received toward the end of December.

Rutledge said this expression of commitment to Western "is a testimony to the quality of its programs and the desire of alumni and friends to invest in the young people of Kentucky."

A significant trend in these gifts, pledges and estate commitments is the movement at Western to use these funds to establish endowments for academic and educational programs, Rutledge said.

Some significant year-end gifts, pledges and estate commitments include:

*Property on University Boulevard from Margaret Madison of Bowling Green. The appraised value of the house and lots is $95,000.
*$50,000 as a partial distribution from the estate of Mildred Givens of Hodgenville. The gift will be used to support the Kentucky Museum and Library.
*$50,000 from an anonymous donor to create an endowment to support scholarships for financially needy students from Kentucky.
*$30,000 from Huntsman Packaging Corp. of Bowling Green to the Chemistry Department. The gift, $6,000 a year for five years, will support two student research fellowships in the Thermal Analysis Laboratory.
*$25,000 from Virginia McCalister of Louisville to create an endowed scholarship in history in...

level, Rutledge says. "A Capital Campaign raises the sights and expectations of the University and of the donors. It raises the whole activity to a new level and will keep it to a new level because of the quality of our programs, and our marketing and promotion of those programs," he says.

"I am very concerned and cognizant that we must exhibit a high degree of fiduciary responsibility in investing money to raise money," said Rutledge, adding:

"Our goal is to raise significant assets for Western Kentucky University at a cost equal to or less than the cost of major gift fund-raising."

President Thomas C. Meredith also acknowledged the budgetary and other concerns many faculty and staff have expressed since the establishment of the WKU Foundation.

"Referring to the Capital Campaign during the Jan. 20 Board of Regents meeting, Dr. Meredith said: 'Western is light years behind other institutions in this effort.

"I do not understand the distrust of this concept," he said, adding: 'We simply must give this a chance. What you're approving today is a strategic plan for a major campaign, and a budget to show what it's going to cost. It will take some money to make money, and some people just don't understand this, but you're making the institution's future," the President said.

"Donors need to see that we're committed to a plan," Rutledge said, adding: 'Donors will respond to program-specific appeals, not to unrestricted appeals and to appeals for replacements and operating costs, and therefore it is crucial that the campaign involve an entire campus-wide effort. "We will have to show that contributors' donations will be enhancing our programs by a margin of excellence, and that is our bottom line," Rutledge said.

In 1991, WKU adopted the University's first-ever strategic plan, Western XXI.

"This has helped immensely in our planning and our budgeting decisions," President Meredith said.

And since last spring, the campus has been debating the President's discussion paper, Moving to a New Level While Keeping Old Traditions, which calls for dramatic changes to occur at Western over the next several years.

Some of those involve raising admissions standards, restructuring the evaluation system, changing teaching methods to increase learner involvement and use of technology, plus many more.

In a letter to WKU alumni, Dr. Meredith said: "Our state has declared that our funding will be based more on performance than on absolute enrollment numbers in the future. It is important that the already high quality of our institution be raised to the next level in order to adequately address this new funding direction."

Western can expect no less from private donors who are asked to give their dollars, those which people have committed after taking care of themselves and of their families, Rutledge said.

It is true they will be looking for solid academic programs, not salaries, not needed repairs, to which to give their financial sup-
Progress continues in the networking of Western Kentucky University. Buildings which are fully wired and connected will shortly include Wetherby Administration Building, Potter Hall, Craig Alumni Center, Thompson Complex North Wing, Thompson Complex Central Wing, Environmental Science and Technology Building, and Grise Hall. There are already 460 Western Kentucky University personnel connected to WKUNET. Microcomputing Support and the networking group in the administrative computing area will be working to connect everyone in the science and business buildings over the next few weeks.

Additional wiring in the residence halls is to be completed in January. We will be connecting students in Pearce Ford Tower and other halls as they are completed. These students have access to all of the resources available in the University general access labs including the library, Internet, and access to the University mainframes.

Planning, design, and wiring of the remaining buildings will continue through the fall of 1995. By the end of calendar year 1995 we anticipate being “completely” networked. A summary of the services which will be available on WKUNET is provided in graphic form with this update.

ONLINE UPDATE

Another significant development is the establishment of Western Online. This Internet, Worldwide Web service will provide information about Western Kentucky University, its departments, its libraries, and other services. A prototype service is already available on the Internet and should be completed in format and form within the next 30 days. We invite proposals from information providers regarding information they may want to place in Western Online. These proposals will be reviewed by the University Information Resources Committee's Campus Wide Information System (CWIS) subcommittee and considered for inclusion in Western Online. If you are already connected to WKUNET, you can view Western Online through your Mosaic interface. It's address is WWW.MSC.WKU.EDU.

This is just a beginning. Other services will be developed and implemented in the future. We welcome your comments and suggestions.

Public Radio wins Agriculture Oscar

WKU's Public Radio Service, including flagship station WKYU-FM, is the national winner of the Oscar in Agriculture competition. The awards program, administered by the University of Illinois, selects one outstanding radio broadcast per year, based upon coverage of an issue related to rural concerns or agriculture.

The winning entry was an in-depth report on the health and economic issues facing Kentucky's tobacco industry. Titled "An Endangered Enterprise," the 29-minute report was produced by News Director Dan Modlin and Assistant News Director Jeanine Howard Gibbs.

Dr. Thomas C. Meredith, left, WKU President, and Judy Byrd, right, coordinator of Ideas for Efficiency, recently congratulated for their Ideas for Efficiency, Elna Sabo-Martin, second from left, Kit Tolbert, center, and Carol White, second from right. Sabo-Martin proposed the idea to move postal services to one central location; Tolbert suggested training student employees to change lighting in residence halls normally handled by facilities management; White suggested E-mail addresses of faculty, staff and students be included in the campus telephone directory.

Other Business by the Board of Regents Jan. 20

In addition to approving the Strategic Plan for the University’s Major Capital Campaign, the WKU Board of Regents at its regular quarterly meeting Jan. 20:

• Approved an amendment to the University’s course repetition policy that will allow undergraduates to repeat a maximum of 18 hours or six courses, whichever comes first. Six of those hours, or two courses, can replace a C or above.
• Approved allocation of nearly $200,000 from the 1993-94 fund balance. Regents added $100,000 to the University’s institutional reserve and approved spending $60,000 for computers and software to upgrade the Department of Purchasing and $34,000 for a new patrol car and radio equipment for WKU Police.
• Approved naming the auditorium in the Garrett Conference Center in honor of Theresa W. Gerard, a WKU graduate and long-time WKU employee. Mrs. Gerard, hostess for Garrett Conference Center, began her employment at Western in 1970, retired in 1989 and has continued to work on a full-time, temporary basis since.
• Approved a lease agreement with the Western Kentucky University Foundation for property on University Boulevard. The property has been placed in a charitable trust agreement with the Foundation by Margaret Madison of Bowling Green.
• Approved a resolution in support of continued federal funding for the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, which provides financial support for WKYU-FM and WKYU-TV, Western’s public broadcasting service. The U.S. Congress is considering cutting or eliminating funding for public broadcasting.

memory of Dr. A.M. Stickles, a former head of the WKU History Department.

• $21,603 from Dr. Janice Owens Aaron of Louisville to support the newly created Ogden College Study Center for WKU students majoring in pre-medicine. The endowment will provide learning enrichment materials and computer assisted study activities. Dr. Aaron, a WKU graduate, is the acting chair of the Department of Radiology at the University of Louisville School of Medicine.
• $20,000 over five years from National City Bank of Bowling Green. Half of the gift will create an endowment to support continued excellence within the Bowling Green College of Business Administration. The rest will support the continuation of the annual luncheon to recognize outstanding high school seniors in the Bowling Green and Warren County schools.
• $12,885 from Bediah Winchel of Hardinsburg to create an endowment in the Agriculture Department to support the horticulture program.

In addition to these gifts, Western has been named in two estates. One of these deferred gifts, from an anonymous donor, is estimated to be in excess of $1.7 million. It will endow numerous Presidential Scholarships at Western and will help attract some of the best and brightest students to the University, Rutledge said. "These students are very important to us and to our educational programs," he said.

An additional $50,000 bequest will provide scholarship assistance to needy students.

Jonathan Jeffrey has Riverview: Saving the Past, a personal history of Bowling Green’s historic house museum, Riverview published by the Landmark Association. Jeffrey also has published A New Wrinkle in Rural Uplift: Henry Hardin Cherry and His Farmers, Chautauquas published in the Register of the Kentucky Historical Society, Vol. 92, No. 3.

Dr. Kathy Kalah, Sociology and Anthropology, published Japanese Women: A Personal Reflection in the winter 1994-95 issue of The Japan Center of Tennessee Newsletter.

Dr. Mary Ellen Pitts, Head of the Department of English, has had Toward a Dialectic of the Open End: The Scientist as Writer and the Revolution Against Measurement published in The Centennial Review, 38.1 (Winter 1994): 179-204.

Recent grant awards

MINORITY TEACHERS
The Department of Educational Leadership has received a subgrant from the University of Louisville to identify and recruit potentially able teachers from minority populations in the region. It is part of a more than $1 million grant from the U.S. Department of Education to encourage minority students to become teachers and will help fund such activities as career awareness programs and teacher clubs in eight school districts. For more information, contact Dr. Chris Wagner, associate professor of educational leadership, (502) 745-4890.

GIFTED AND TALENTED STUDENTS
This project has been funded for a second year with a grant of more than $250,000 by the U.S. Department of Education. It addresses the needs of economically disadvantaged and disabled students by working with the Kentucky Department of Education; school districts in Bowling Green and Warren, Edmonson and Fayette counties; the Professional Development Center Network and the Central Kentucky Educational Cooperative. It will identify and develop primary school staff to improve curriculum and assessment to better meet the diverse learning needs of young children and continue to implement the goals of the Kentucky Education Reform Act. The project will pave the way to identify young gifted children who may not be otherwise identified. For more information, contact Dr. Mary Dillingham, director of the Outreach Program, (502) 745-6121.

WRITING PROJECT
The $50,000 grant from the Kentucky Department of Education marks the ninth straight year of funding for the English Department’s Outreach Program. It provides varied staff development opportunities for English educators in the region through various workshops, teacher-research projects and a portfolio analysis session. These opportunities will move nearly 400 participants forward to meet KERA writing goals. For more information, contact Dr. John Vukura, professor of teacher education, (502) 745-6121.

TRAINING FOR TEACHERS OF DISABLED
A $10,000 grant from the WHAS Crusade for Children is funding tuition scholarships to support inservice training for teachers of the disabled from age 3-21. The teachers demonstrate financial need and are accepted to enroll in the graduate program in Exceptional Child Education. The training will benefit the teachers of about 200 disabled students and enables Western to further realize the KERA goal to provide educational services to all students. For more information, contact Dr. John Vukura, professor of teacher education, (502) 745-5139.

MATH AND ALGEBRA TEACHERS
A $30,000 grant from the Eisenhower Math and Science Program through the Kentucky Council on Higher Education will provide workshops to help improve the skills of math and algebra teachers. “School Mathematics (5-9) and Algebra (8-12) Revisited” provides one-week summer institutes at Western and follow-up activities that will connect with KERA to improve teacher skills and curriculum in the “teachers teaching teachers” model. Participants will receive materials on content technique and computer software. For more information, contact Dr. Robert Bueker, professor of mathematics, (502) 745-6121.
